

It's The History Girls!

More than 150 Rainbows, Brownies, Guides, Senior Section and Trefoil Guild members from Luton North and Luton South Divisions entertained the public with a 'living history display' to celebrate 100 years of Girlguiding.

Girlguiding members and the public took part in activities during the two-day event at Stockwood Discovery Centre, Luton.

They reminisced over the archives, learnt about how camping has evolved and saw how members still enjoy an organisation which is as relevant to today's girls as it was to girls 100 years ago.

The public were invited to join members in campfire songs, making masks, semaphore, cleaning brass, playing parachute games and watching a slide show of the many exciting activities that members have had the opportunity to take part in during the centenary year.

The archives proved popular with visitors, who were able to recall the uniform they once wore.

One woman who is no longer involved with the movement even recited the Promise she had made as a Brownie.
